ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This research has been supported under the Saskatchewan-Canada Historic Places Initiative. The advice of several staff members from Saskatchewan Culture, Youth and Recreation is greatly appreciated. In particular, the author would like to thank Bruce Dawson, Project Officer, Saskatchewan-Canada Historic Places Initiative; Bernard Flaman, Heritage Architect; and, Frank Korvemaker, Research and Restoration Advisor, Saskatchewan Heritage Foundation.

The author also sincerely thanks Don Black of Regina for providing access to his unique collection of early photographs of Regina buildings designed and constructed by Storey and Van Egmond. It is hoped that a wider circulation of these photographs will be possible in the future.

INTRODUCTION

The Historic Places Initiative is a federal-provincial-territorial partnership, administered in Saskatchewan by Saskatchewan Culture, Youth and Recreation, which has been created to help preserve and celebrate Canada's historic places. Under this initiative, the partners are collaborating in compiling a Canadian Register of Historic Places which will be a national, searchable database of historic places of local, provincial, territorial or national significance. It is expected that this database will be formally launched during 2004.

While basic information about each designated heritage property is readily available, information about the architects responsible for the design of these buildings in Saskatchewan is limited. A more thorough investigation of these architects, including their training, proposed and completed projects, location of architectural drawings and other resource materials, and a general interpretation of their work is warranted. This report begins to fulfill this requirement for the Saskatchewan architectural firm of Storey and Van Egmond (referred to as SVE throughout this document) and its immediate successors.

In undertaking this research, it quickly became apparent that this was not a trivial task. Over the first half of the last century, SVE was commissioned to design hundreds of buildings, primarily throughout Saskatchewan. Most of these buildings were subsequently constructed and many still exist today. Given the time constraints imposed on this project by the fiscal year, Saskatchewan Culture, Youth and Recreation decided that the following objectives would be undertaken:

1. document biographical information about the principals of SVE and the evolution of the firm, including education, architectural training, career progression and post-career activities;
2. develop as complete a listing as possible of all the work proposed and undertaken by SVE;
3. document each SVE building designated as either a Provincial or Municipal Heritage Property (35 properties), including, where possible, information about the construction of the building (date designed and completed, construction materials, and contractors), historical and contemporary photographs, location of any architectural drawings and other resource materials;
4. undertake a basic analysis of architectural styles and trends employed by the firm; and,
5. compile a bibliographic listing of all sources consulted.

BIOGRAPHY

Edgar M. Storey was born to Peter and Alzma Storey on September 16, 1863 in Cherry Valley, Prince Edward County, Ontario. After completing high school in Sydenham, Ontario in 1880, Edgar moved to Brooklyn, New York and worked in the branch architectural office of R. P. White until about 1893<sup>1</sup>. He then moved to Kingston, Ontario to start his own practice. Edgar married the former Phoebe Laturney of Kingston, Ontario in 1887 and they had four children: Norman, Bessie, Stanley, and Allie. In 1906<sup>2</sup> he and his youngest son, Stanley, moved to Regina, establishing an architectural practice there<sup>3</sup>. In 1907 they were joined by the rest of the family.

He had a heavy work load in the summer of 1906 and hired William Gysbert Van Egmond as a draftsman. Van Egmond was representing a non-resident architect in Regina at that time<sup>4</sup>. Edgar became particularly well-respected in the structural and plumbing and heating sides of the profession<sup>5</sup>.

Edgar was a member of the Assiniboia Club, the Regina Boat Club, the Regina Gun Club, and the Saskatoon Club. He died in Regina on August 24, 1913 after a lengthy illness and is buried in the Regina Cemetery. Phoebe Storey passed way in 1947.

William Gysbert Van Egmond, the son of William D. and Jessie Van Egmond, was born on September 16, 1883 in Egmondville, Huron County, Ontario<sup>6</sup>. After completing high school at Seaforth, Ontario, he attended the Beaux Arts School in Toronto and then worked as a draftsman with Gowinlock and Baker. He next worked as a draftsman in New York<sup>7</sup>. Van Egmond married Mabel Isabel Ball of Toronto in January 1906 and they both came to Regina early that year<sup>8</sup>. He brought with him a set of architectural books from the International Correspondence School which his father had given him<sup>9</sup>. They later had two daughters<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> In early 1982, the Norman Mackenzie Art Gallery in Regina had an exhibit of early residential architecture which was published later that year as Early Domestic Architecture in Regina: Presentation Drawings and Plans, p. 34.

<sup>2</sup> Early Domestic Architecture in Regina, p.34; other sources suggest that this might have been as early as 1905.

<sup>3</sup> Edgar was a Charter Member of the Saskatchewan Association of Architects when it was formed in 1912. His application was dated March 14, 1912; he was registered as Member #34.

<sup>8</sup> The 1906 Henderson's North-West Gazetteer and Directory lists Van Egmond as the resident architect and office manager for Walter W. La Chance of Saskatoon. La Chance also had an office in Prince Albert at the time.

William's connection to Egmondville is interesting. Colonel Anthony Van Egmond, William's paternal great-grandfather, and one of many Pennsylvania Dutch who came to Upper Canada, was known as the 'Father of the Huron Tract'. As a contractor for the Canada Company, he constructed the road which opened the tract to the settlers in the 1830s. He then offered lands, services and finances to them but becoming frustrated by a perceived corrupt government, he joined with William Lyon MacKenzie in the ill-fated Upper Canada Rebellion of 1837. Van Egmond was captured and taken to the Don Jail but died under the harsh conditions, with much of his vast land holdings being confiscated<sup>11</sup>. He was later exonerated but his property was never returned to his family.

In early 1907 Edgar Storey and William Van Egmond collaborated in winning a competition for a new public school in the north end of Regina (Albert School; demolished) and the partnership of Storey and Van Egmond was born. Van Egmond would continue with the firm for over forty years, becoming the chief designer and site supervisor<sup>12</sup>.

Van, as he was known, was very active in the Saskatchewan Association of Architects (SAA). He was elected as their first Secretary-Treasurer and later served as President for eight years. He was a member of the SAA Board of Examiners from 1913 to 1920 and was elected to the College of Fellows of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada (RAIC) on February 21, 1930<sup>13</sup>. Van was a member of the Assiniboia Club, Rotary Club, Wa Wa Temple, and the Regina Chamber of Commerce. Van Egmond was an ardent sportsman, particularly enjoying fishing, hunting, boating, and golfing. He was an active member of the Wascana Country Club and Wascana Winter Club, becoming President of both<sup>14</sup>.

William Van Egmond suffered a heart attack on October 9th, 1949 while on a trip to Stoughton, Saskatchewan and died while being driven back to Regina<sup>15</sup>. Perhaps fittingly, he is buried near Edgar Storey.

Edgar's son, Stanley Edgar Storey, was born at Kingston on August 3, 1888 and came to Regina with his father in 1906. After working as a draftsman in his father's firm of Storey and Van Egmond, Stan returned to Kingston to study architecture at Queen's University. He then studied a further two years at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston<sup>16</sup> and returned to Regina prior to the death of his father<sup>17</sup>. Like many of his contemporaries, Stan joined the army in 1915 and served with the 1st Canadian Cavalry

<sup>12</sup> Like Edgar Storey, Van Egmond also was a Charter Member of the SAA, becoming Member #39. His application was dated March 21, 1912.

Brigade until transferring to the Royal Flying Corps in 1918. He was invalided home shortly before the armistice<sup>18</sup> and soon rejoined Van Egmond.

Stan married Mabel McNichol of Plattsville, Ontario in January 1922. They apparently had no children<sup>19</sup>.

After Van Egmond's death in 1949, Stan carried on the practice with Wendell (Wen.) E. Marvin under the name of Storey and Marvin. Stan Storey died in Regina on November 5th, 1959 and is buried in the Soldiers' Plot of the Regina Cemetery<sup>20</sup>.

Like Van Egmond, Stan Storey also was active in the SAA<sup>21</sup>. He was elected to SAA Council and served as President from 1941 to 1943. He was on their Board of Examiners from 1950 to 1952. In 1954, he was elected a Fellow of the RAIC. Stan was a member of several organizations, including the Assiniboia Club, the Knights of Pythias, the Regina Kiwanis Club, and the Canadian Club. He was active in the Regina Chamber of Commerce, and was a Director of the Grey Nuns Hospital and a life member of the Canadian Legion.

EVOLUTION OF THE FIRM

The architectural firm of Storey and Van Egmond, and its successors, was the pre-eminent firm in Saskatchewan throughout much of the first half of the last century. This firm designed and constructed several hundred buildings, many of which continue to be a vital part of communities throughout Saskatchewan, other provinces, and in at least two American states.

The firm was known as “Storey and Van Egmond” until late 1924<sup>22</sup>, more than a decade after the death of the elder Storey, and as “Van Egmond and Storey” for approximately the next 30 years. The ‘Storey’ in this case referred to Stanley. About five years after the death of Van Egmond, Stan Storey formed a partnership with one of his employees, Wendell Marvin. The name “Storey and Marvin” existed until about 1965 after which Alan Vanstone became a partner with Marvin under the name of Marvin and Vanstone (Table 1).

Throughout much of their career, SVE occupied offices in buildings of their own design (Table 1). It is not known why they changed office locations from the Northern Bank Building to the McCallum-Hill Building in 1911 but this might have been a response to changing economic times, either for good or bad. In any event, quite remarkably, SVE maintained an office in the McCallum-Hill Building for about 45 years!

SVE also maintained an office in Saskatoon for a few years beginning in about 1910<sup>23</sup>. Their office initially was located in the Canadian Bank of Commerce Building and then in Room 1 of the Hunt Block at 99 23rd Street East. The firm had several early contracts in Saskatoon, including the Court House (1907; demolished), Nutana Collegiate (1909), and the Land Titles Building (1910), which may have necessitated opening the sub-office. Van Egmond apparently closed the office after the death, in 1913, of his partner but this may also have coincided with the downturn in the demand for new construction during the First War<sup>24</sup> or with increased competition from local architects.

A year or so after Stan Storey’s death, Wen Marvin moved the practice to his residence, where he had been living for about a decade. Interestingly, the house has been restored although it was moved a block north of its original location on McIntyre Street when the Carriage Lane condominiums were constructed (Figure 2). Several small companies now operate out of this site, including “Laurie Artiss, The Pin People”. In about 1964, Marvin established his office at 1950 Broad Street (Figure 3).

<sup>24</sup> SVE undertook no significant new work in Saskatoon after 1910; they completed minor alterations to only two buildings between 1918 and 1925.

How large a company was SVE, how did the personnel change over time, and who were some of the key staff? Answers to these questions are elusive. It can be assumed that the company expanded considerably during the boom years (1910-1913; 1926-1929) and might have contracted to as few as 3 or 4 staff during the Depression years and at other times. We, however, do know something about two of their Chief Draftsmen, A.J. Rowley and Harold C. Bishop.

One reference<sup>25</sup> cites A.J. (Alfred John) Rowley as being SVE's Chief Draftsman from about 1911 to 1919<sup>26</sup>. However, the Regina Henderson Directory lists him as a draftsman with SVE in 1911 and as an architect with them in 1912. For the next five years Rowley is listed as an architect but no affiliation is indicated. By 1918 he was practising from the Western Trust Building on 11th Avenue so presumably had left the employ of SVE by then (SVE were operating out of the McCallum-Hill Building)<sup>27</sup>.

Harold C. Bishop began as a student with SVE in about 1925 and within a few years was their Chief Draftsman. His initials appear on many of the drawings produced during the late 1920s but he had apparently left the firm by about 1931, perhaps due to a lack of work during the early Depression years. He may have returned to England about that time<sup>28</sup>.

<sup>26</sup> Rowley's application for membership in the SAA is dated April 13, 1912. He became Member #50.

<sup>29</sup> The 1906 Henderson's North-West Gazetteer and Directory lists Edgar M. Storey as an 'Architect and Appraiser, Hamilton Street above 11th Ave.' While his name is not listed in the 1905 edition, it is possible that he arrived in Regina that year but too late for his name to appear in this publication.

<sup>30</sup> Van Egmond is listed the 1906 Henderson's North-West Gazetteer and Directory as an architect and office manager with W.W. La Chance. La Chance's address is listed as 'Hamilton St. near 11th Ave' so it is possible that Storey and La Chance occupied the same building and perhaps this is how Storey met Van Egmond.

THE ARCHITECTURAL LEGACY

It is not known precisely how many buildings were designed by SVE but many of the firm's original architectural drawings and preliminary sketches were donated to the Saskatchewan Archives Board (SAB) by Mrs. G. Helen Vanstone in July 1983. A review of the SAB Finding Aid lists the last contract (number 1190) as the Carmichael United Church Hall in Regina, dated February, 1956. However, at least one other building, the Diocese of Qu'Appelle Gymnasium in Regina (1958) is known to have been partly attributed to Stan Storey under the firm name "Storey and Marvin". But is this contract number a realistic indicator of the actual number of commissions undertaken by SVE, as some previous investigators have suggested? The author is of the opinion that this number is too high.

Firstly, the list of known buildings by SVE, while very impressive, is less than six hundred (Appendix C lists approximately 600 entries but some of these are likely duplicates<sup>31</sup>. Note that Project Numbers have been assigned to each entry based on the year of construction; Heritage Properties are listed first in the table with the other entries in random order). While this probably does not include all their designs, since all their drawings may not have survived, it is considered unlikely by this author that another 600 buildings were commissioned. Notwithstanding the obvious prolific output of SVE, to complete more than 1190 designs (admittedly, many buildings were proposed but never realized, and many minor alterations were included in this list) over a 50-year span would mean an average of almost 24 potential buildings per year. Of the known buildings constructed, Appendix C lists 44 entries for 1929, which is the peak year, but output in many other years was minimal. The firm's production reflected the economic circumstances prevailing in Saskatchewan; the years immediately prior to the First War and the period from 1926 to about 1929 were considered boom years for Regina and area. The number of commissions declined drastically through the Depression years of the 1930s and only about 20 contracts were apparently secured from 1941 to 1958 (Table 2).

Secondly, it might be expected that contract numbers would be assigned in chronological order, or perhaps in blocks by year, but an analysis of the SAB Finding Aid does not support this (as mentioned previously, it is appreciated that not all drawings have survived). For example, in 1912 there are 29 entries with the sequential contract numbers running from 197 to 245. This is generally typical of other years although for some years there is a better correlation.

Next, SVE apparently did not include the contract numbers on their earliest architectural drawings (this perhaps was not an unusual arrangement for the times; in addition, a number of plans did not include the design date). The earliest recorded contract number is number 94 for the Cameron and Heap Warehouse in Weyburn (1910) but only about twenty-five other buildings without any contract number are known to have been constructed by SVE between 1907 and 1910. To design almost one hundred buildings during the first five years of Saskatchewan's existence as a province would seem an ambitious undertaking, even if many of these were smaller commissions.

While we know that Edgar Storey was practising in Regina possibly as early as 1905<sup>32</sup>, no record exists about any of the work he undertook prior to 1907.<sup>33</sup> Land development was flourishing in Regina at this time and he presumably had enough work to enable his family to join him in 1907 (there were clearly few architects in Regina at this time).

HERITAGE DESIGNATIONS

Overview

SVE's commissions can be found in almost 100 communities throughout Saskatchewan. In addition, their buildings have been constructed in towns and cities in British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, New York State, and North Dakota. Of these, thirty-six have been designated as either provincial or municipal heritage properties (Table 3)<sup>34</sup>.

These designations include churches, schools, apartment buildings, government buildings, residences, commercial buildings, and a memorial hall, and mausoleum. The range illustrates the versatility of this firm and reflects the diversity of their clientele. Since SVE's principal office was in Regina, it is not surprising that most of these heritage-designated buildings are located there, but fourteen other communities are also represented in this list.

These thirty-six structures form the basis for initial analysis of architectural styles employed by this firm. Appendix A includes the summary sheet for each property. Where possible, photographs are included showing what each structure looked like during an early period as well as in more recent times. It should be noted that, in some cases, no historic photographs have been found; it is anticipated that current photographs of all buildings will be added to Appendix A and B.

Stylistic Influences

Given the longevity of the firm and the number and diversity of projects undertaken during this period by SVE, it is very difficult to synthesize trends in their design philosophies. Even restricting this type of stylistic analysis to the 36 designated heritage buildings presents a challenge since this covers almost a 50-year period (1909 to 1956).

A review of the general cladding material used by SVE clearly indicated their preference for brick. Twenty-four of the 36 buildings on this list use brick as the predominant material while an additional four buildings use brick veneer - perhaps an economic consideration by the owners. This preference is generally consistent with buildings constructed by other firms, particularly in Regina but likely elsewhere throughout Saskatchewan, during this period. This may reflect the technology of the day as well as the availability and relative cost of this material. Many small brick plants were established close to thriving communities in the early part of the past century. Major brick industries arose at Saskatchewan locations such as Claybank (Dominion Fire Brick and Clay Products), Estevan, Bruno, and Moose Jaw, for example. Bricks were also shipped to Saskatchewan communities from Medicine Hat (Redcliff), Manitoba (towns such as Portage la Prairie), Fort William (Thunder Bay), Ontario, Menominee (Wisconsin), and Missouri, as well as from other locations.

Cut stone, especially from the Tyndall area of Manitoba, was another common construction material used by SVE, but this was primarily used for accents (around windows and doors and as quoins). Only two heritage buildings (the Peart/Mitchell Building and Motherwell Building in Regina) used cut stone as the major cladding material.

The most common stylistic devices used by SVE include pilasters (either brick or stone), round-head windows, galvanized cornices, and stone or concrete quoins.

Table 4 summarizes the predominant stylistic influences for these 36 heritage buildings. To assist in this analysis, the buildings have been grouped into several common types of uses. Representative heritage buildings of SVE are used to illustrate the various architectural styles<sup>35</sup>. Appendix E summarizes the essential elements of each major style.

Commercial Buildings

1. W.G. Downing Warehouse (1913-03)

This building is typical of the warehouses that were constructed in Regina, and in other cities, from about 1910 until around the First War, and reflects the Chicago style of architecture. This style, which was popular until about the 1930s, incorporated the new technology of steel and reinforced concrete construction. Since the exterior walls were no longer load-bearing, window area could be expanded to improve ventilation and natural lighting. Other stylistic elements include a flat and unadorned roof line, and rectangular windows. The brick pilasters with stone caps enhance the vertical dimension of this building. 'Sullivan-esque-style' buildings display three distinct vertical zones: a base with large windows, an intermediate section (the shaft), and a top section (the capital). SVE's McCallum-Hill Building (1913-20; demolished 1982) was an excellent Regina example of this variant of Chicago style.

<sup>35</sup> Other architectural styles have been identified but for the purposes of this report, emphasis is placed on those styles employed by SVE.

2. Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Co./Revenue Building (1914-01)

Many of SVE's commercial and public buildings exhibit Classical Revival elements. This style was popular during the first three decades of the 1900s. The principal stylistic elements include simple and symmetrical features, a flat and unadorned roof line, and openings which are lintelled rather than arched. Decorations such as wreaths and garlands are common. The wide, full-height brick pilasters capped with stone add to the classical appearance of the Co-operative Elevator/ Revenue Building in Regina. The terra cotta trim and blue and green tile add interesting details to this building.

3. Travellers Building (1929-01)

Examples of SVE buildings with Art Deco or Art Moderne elements are comparatively rare. The Royal Canadian Legion Memorial Hall (1947-01) in Regina and the former Grenfell Apartments (1939-07) on Hamilton Street are notable examples. While perhaps not the best example of this style, the vertical piers and detailed window mullions evident on the façade of the Travellers Building in Regina create an overall impression of somewhat restrained Art Deco styling. This architectural style was common during the 1920s and 1930s.

Public Buildings

1. Regina Post Office (original building 1909; SVE addition 1930-03)

The original (northern) section of the Post Office Building in Regina was designed under the direction of the Dominion Architect, David Ewart, and constructed between 1906 and 1909. The southern section was designed by SVE in 1930 to match the original style. The federal government adopted the Edwardian Classical style for many of its smaller buildings.<sup>36</sup> The Tyndall stone building's main stylistic features include Ionic columns and pilasters, a rusticated stone base, prominent corner cupola, pronounced keystones and voussoirs, and a well-delineated cornice.

This federal building is similar to the Post Office Building in Moose Jaw which was completed in 1911.

2. Moose Jaw Land Titles Building (1910-03)

As mentioned previously, the Classical Revival style was popular during the early decades of the last century. The Moose Jaw Land Titles Building has a dominant projecting central entranceway with double doors contained within an intricate stone surround. This is flanked by Doric stone columns and thick-coursed brick pilasters. The columns support a stone slab, prominent denticulated cornice, and stepped parapet. Brick quoins and keystones set above the brick-arched windows provide a pleasing effect.

3. Melville Town Hall (1910-04)

The Melville Town Hall and Opera House is an example of the Georgian Revival style of architecture which first appeared in Canada in the 1910s. It also may be considered as a Modern Classical style.<sup>37</sup> This classical style is generally distinguished by a symmetrical façade with a decorative, centrally placed entrance. In the case of the Melville Town Hall, the wide brick pilasters are treated as panels, leading to a simple entablature. Multi-pane sash windows and prominent cornice are common.

4. Telephone Exchange Building, Regina (1913-01)

The Italianate style, popular until the 1920s, was rarely uadopted by SVE, and other Saskatchewan architects. The Regina Telephone Exchange Building on Lorne Street is the only known example by SVE. The building's proportions, decoration and repetitive window pattern are reminiscent of urban palaces built during the Italian Renaissance.<sup>38</sup> Stylistic features include a flat roof with elaborate cornice, and pronounced quoins and mouldings. The Regina Telephone Exchange Building has an elaborate Bedford Stone main entrance and four distinctive round windows flanking the side entrance.

5. Motherwell Building (1956-01)

The International style, also referred to as the Modern Style, was in vogue in Canada from the 1940s until the 1970s. It is recognized by its repetitive rectangular grid, large expanses of glass, and often severe expression with a general absence of ornamentation. The design was a response to the steel and reinforced concrete structural methods which were popular during this period. The Motherwell Building in Regina is an excellent example of this style. The cube-like massing, large horizontally-arranged windows and lack of decoration combine to define a severe and functional style.

Residential Buildings

1. Mayfair Apartments (1929-02)

The Mayfair Apartments in Regina represent SVE's expression of the Chateau style of architecture. The general style incorporates a steeply-pitched roof with multiple dormers with crenellations and pyramidal caps. Other characteristic features of this building include spires and a Gothic-arched entrance with Tyndall Stone detailing. The overall effect is to give the Mayfair a pleasing 'fairy tale' appearance. The Chateau Apartments (1927-04) and Linden Manor (1928-09), both in Regina and designed by SVE, represent other examples of the Chateau style employed successfully by this firm.

2. Kenora Apartments (1929-03)

SVE designed only a few buildings in the Gothic/Tudor Revival style. For example, All Saints Anglican Church in Pense, Saskatchewan (1910-04) exhibits Gothic elements whereas the Kenora Apartments in Regina combines both Gothic and Tudor elements. The Kenora has a steeple, complete with weather vane, and a Gothic main entrance. Wood corbels and half-timbering are reminiscent of the Tudor Revival style. The Gothic Revival style was typically used in church architecture.

In summary, SVE had a pre-disposition for using Classical Revival elements, particularly prior to about 1930. Classical influences included simple and symmetrical designs, flat and generally unadorned rooflines, and the use of columns, capitals and pediments (including wide use of pilasters). These influences were typical for the period. While SVE did experiment with other architectural styles, including Italianate, Gothic Revival, Edwardian Classicism, Prairie School, and variants of Art Deco, no clear pattern emerges over time from these stylistic influences.

OTHER REGINA BUILDINGS

Storey and Van Egmond undertook an estimated 380 commissions in Regina (see Appendix C) but not all of these designs were constructed. Of these, 19 are currently designated as heritage properties; approximately another sixty buildings are still standing<sup>39</sup> although uncertainty exists about several of these buildings. For example, the Regina Exhibition Association files do not list the original names and dates of several SVE buildings constructed in what is now Exhibition Park, such as the Stable (1925), the Stable and Arena (1930), and the Dining Hall (1943). Thus, it is not possible to confirm whether all these buildings are still in use without correlating SVE's original architectural drawings to these buildings. These structures are included in Table 5 but their status will remain uncertain until further research can be undertaken.

In addition, several buildings at both the Regina General Hospital and the Grey Nuns (Pasqua) Hospital may have been absorbed within the various major additions and alterations each hospital has experienced over the past 78 years. It is not easily discernable from a site visit whether the original SVE buildings still exist. More research also will be required here.

Buildings that are known to have been demolished have been excluded from this list.

Individual Property Sheets have been prepared for all the buildings listed in Table 5 except the private residences<sup>40</sup> but these sheets are somewhat incomplete since, at the time of writing, the author has not had the opportunity to examine all the architectural drawings in detail or to search all the photographic files held by the Saskatchewan Archives Board. These sheets are included in Appendix B.

<sup>39</sup> A further 50 private residences are still standing. In other words, approximately two-thirds of SVE's Regina buildings have already been demolished. It is probable that this rate of attrition is considerably lower in other Saskatchewan communities, especially for smaller towns where population expansion over recent decades has not been significant, but this needs to be confirmed.

<sup>40</sup> The author has concluded that completing Property Sheets for residences, other than those designated as Heritage Properties (see Table 3), may only be of limited value at this time since few archival photographs and other useful references exist. Also, the residential designs of Storey and Van Egmond, and of perhaps other local architects, do not easily lend themselves to an architectural style typology.

SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

As noted throughout this report, the architectural firm of Storey and Van Egmond designed and constructed a wide range of buildings throughout Saskatchewan and elsewhere. This report has synthesized much of the work undertaken by this firm but the research is incomplete given the time constraints of the current project. The following suggestions are offered with a view to providing a more complete documentation of this firm's legacy.

1. Address the gaps and uncertainties identified in Appendix C (particularly where no construction date is known);
2. Confirm those buildings which are still standing (this will require contacting many communities, particularly those in Saskatchewan);
3. Obtain archival and current photos, where possible, of as many buildings as possible;
4. Complete research of all appropriate newspaper microfilm records and local history books;
5. Review City of Regina Building Permits (this might provide an indication of building contractors and when construction might have started); and,
6. Complete as many of the remaining Property Sheets as possible.

APPENDIX E: Architectural Styles

Architectural styles may be broadly classified into two distinct groupings: Classical or Medieval. Each has various sub-types as indicated below. In addition, there are several other styles which do not easily fit these broad descriptions and are often grouped together. However, while various references agree in general with these broad categories, some differences in definition do exist. This can make the classification of building style somewhat subjective.

A. Classical Styles

1. Classical Revival

- broad expanses of flat walls
- simple and symmetrical features
- flat and unadorned roof lines
- openings usually lintelled rather than arched
- entrance porticoes with columns and pilasters crowned by capitals
- decoration common (wreaths, garlands)
- Palladian variation incorporates large central dome
- Arcola Land Titles Building (1912-02)

2. Italianate

- flat or low pitch roof
- elaborate cornice decorated with brackets
- evenly spaced openings
- columns or piers and arched or triangular pediments
- accented by pronounced quoins, mouldings and details
- Regina Telephone Exchange Building (1913-01)

3. Edwardian Classicism

- multi-storey columns or pilasters
- well-delineated cornice
- often a cupola or tower
- Post Office, Regina (1909; addition 1930-03)

4. Georgian Revival (Colonial)

- rectangular plan with symmetrical façade
- medium-pitched hip roof
- detailed cornice with dentils (similar to Classical cornice)
- formal entrance, often with pediment and pilasters
- sash windows with either flat or round heads
- Palladian or fan light windows
- Arcola Court House (1909-02)

5. Beaux-Arts

- barrel-vaulted halls
- Mansard roof
- prominent domes
- grand staircases
- No SVE heritage examples

B. Medieval Styles

6. Gothic Revival

- common church style
- pointed-arch windows
- spire or steeple
- buttresses
- steeply-peaked roof
- All Saints Anglican Church, Pense (1910-04)

7. Collegiate Gothic

- common style for schools and armouries
- crenellated towers
- low symmetrical masses
- stone widely used
- No SVE heritage examples

8. Chateau

- steeply pitched roof and multiple dormers
- turrets, gables and chimneys
- 'fairy tale' appearance
- Mayfair Apartments (1929-02)

9. Romanesque Revival

- repetitive use of round arches for openings
- quoins and belt courses
- dark stone or brick with contrasting lighter stone
- rough textures
- heavy cornices
- squat columns and towers
- Land Titles Building, Saskatoon (1909-01)

C. Other Styles

10. Chicago School

- flat roof with straight front
- area of glass can exceed solid wall material
- normally rectangular windows
- Sullivanesque details include ground floor as base, top floors as capital and middle stories often with strong vertical shafts of windows
- W.G. Downing Warehouse, Regina (1913-03)
