Overview of Travel and Objectives

North America's only integrated energy event provides the opportunity to understand energy sustainability strategies, how oil and gas is still vital to a functioning economy and uncovering how hydrogen has the potential power in everyday lives. The Global Energy Show (GES) is a major international conference, investigating new avenues for renewable energy and how cleantech investments and innovation are at the forefront for decarbonization.

The Government of Saskatchewan promoted Saskatchewan's traditional oil and gas resources, as well as the province's leadership in emerging sectors, such as helium, carbon capture, utilization and storage (CCUS), hydrogen, lithium and geothermal.

Promoting Saskatchewan's unique incentives including the Oil and Gas Processing Investment Incentive (OGPII), the Saskatchewan Petroleum Investment Incentive (SPII), and the Oil Infrastructure Investment Program (OIIP) in marketing leading up to and at the event.
