Overview of Travel and Objectives

The roundtable discussion provided an opportunity to further align strategic interests and identify collaborative opportunities with stakeholders from government, industry, leading think tanks and the financial sector to discuss how to maintain safe and secure global energy supplies, bolster supply chain resilience and promote a North American energy alliance.

Stakeholder meetings brought key U.S. state officials, industry associations and companies from the U.S. and Canada together to advance energy security alongside the global transition to net zero and discussion potential opportunities for collaboration on critical minerals and rare earth elements.
